Chapter 1 by Brian Tapia

It was in the news. On the paper. On social media. And still....no one prepared.

My family did. For some reason we all ways watch the news every night to see what was going on in the world. Mostly we shrug it off. But some, like school shootings, or in this case the dead rising, we would worry.

But with attacks reported, only a few people in my town prepared for the worst. My dad bought me bow and arrow, which surprised me, and my family, that i was very good at using at. My dad also got katanas for each of us. kinda weird, but use full. He was the only one with a gun.

We went to the store to get some more canned food, and some other supplies. On the way there, all hell broke lose.

We saw cars flipped over and some fires. And lots, lots of bullets, along with bodies. Soon we were ambushed by the by the dead silently creeping on us.

And that was the last time my little brother and I saw our parents
